VP message to the ANR community

UC ANR always has a lot going on in the world of nutrition, but this month we seem as active as ever in this important space.

First came the announcement late in February that Pat Crawford, a UC ANR Cooperative Extension specialist who previously served as the director of the Atkins Center for Weight and Health at UC Berkeley, would be joining our Nutrition Policy Institute (NPI).

How can ANR support urban farming in California?
Employment opportunities

ANR at Ag Day at the Capitol

March 18, 2015

Urban agriculture is one tool that has the potential to improve food security in California. To better support the state’s urban agriculture, a statewide assessment of urban agriculture needs was conducted by Rachel Surls, Gail Feenstra, Sheila Golden, Ryan Galt and Shermain Hardesty.
