

Preserving the bounty of local produce, wanting to be more self-sufficient in stocking your pantry, or helping others experiencing food insecurity ... why is food preservation important to you?

Interest in food preservation is surging, but most people have little to no experience and lack essential knowledge in food safety. Which, could be a recipe for disaster ...

Thankfully, the UC Master Food Preserver Program offers a unique combination of online resources and hands-on learning to make food preservation expertise accessible to all. Our volunteers are delivering these important lessons directly to people in their communities.

This is why we are writing to you today. Your support helps ensure UC Master Food Preservers continue to provide research-based knowledge and essential resources to communities across California. We are committed to safety, connecting, and learning from our shared experiences.

Help us reach more people in 2022. By investing in our volunteers and improving training and continuing education we can strengthen and grow our program to meet the increasing demand.

Your gift will increase our capacity to deliver more hands-on learning opportunities, workshops and online programming, as well as outreach at Farmers Markets, County Fairs, and local Food Banks. We are delivering knowledge that crosses cultural and economic barriers, and keeps people safe, healthy, and happy.

“Preserve today, relish tomorrow.” Your special year-end gift will demonstrate that you, too, know the importance of safe food preservation and the value of the UC Master Food Preserver community.
