

We sure do! The address is <http://cesantacruz.ucdavis.edu>. There is quite a lot of information available for you to view on our website. First you will see that we have programs in Agriculture and Natural Resources. If you click on the icon, you will be able to learn more about our advisor staff and activities in environmental horticulture, strawberries and caneberries, farm management and small farms, and marine science. Next you will see that we have programs in Youth Development. By clicking on that icon, you can learn more about our staff and their various activities, which includes Youth Community Science Education and the 4-H Community Club Program. You will also see that we have a Master Gardeners Program. You can click on that icon to learn more about these activities.

In addition, we also post various studies, newsletters, and newsletter columns on our website, as well as our annual reports, which contain details about each advisor's work each year. This work, which highlights many of our research and education programs, is located under Local Research and Reports or Publications.

The website is also a great way to learn about upcoming events and educational programs—locally and elsewhere in the region. Listings often contain agendas and whether or not educational credits are available, and always contain contact information so that you can speak with someone to answer any additional questions you might have.

Information on a wide variety of topics such as food and nutrition, families, animal agriculture, and campus agricultural programs is also available to you by clicking on More Information.

We regularly update the website, and are always looking for ways to make information more available to you. So even if you have checked our website in the past, we encourage you to visit our site again... and again! And of course, we are available to help answer questions and provide information at our physical office location as well.
