

“We will learn no matter what! Learning is as natural as rest or play. With or without books, inspiring trainers or classrooms we will manage to learn. Educators can, however, make a difference in what people learn and how well they learn it. If we know why we are learning and if the reason fits our needs as we perceive them, we will learn quickly and deeply.”

Malcolm Knowles, educator

“Inquiry is a process that all individuals naturally use in approaching new situations and solving problems in life. By engaging in inquiry, ...children...gain experience with the mental activities that will improve their capacity to handle life situations and solve everyday problems.”

- Edmund Marek and Ann Cavallo (1997)
