Tips to Making Your Next Presentation Ted-Worthy
by Adam Napolitan, UC Davis 2019

Want an engaging talk? Here are some tips for developing your talk.

How should I prepare

1. Draft an outline: i.e., a flow of ideas (a storyboard).
2. From that flow, use a highlighter or sticky notes to identify key points.
3. Each key point (or single idea) then becomes a slide.
4. Find an image that relates to the idea of the slide. It is even better if the image conveys some emotion.
5. Don’t over clutter your slides.
   a. Avoid lots of words on your slide - otherwise people will be busy reading and not listening to you.
   b. You can consider 27 words on a slide as a critical maximum. Less is better.
   c. A slide should get the idea across in about 3 seconds. That allows attention to move back to the speaker to expand on the point.
   Remember: Slides are an aid. The focus should be on the speaker.

Finding Image tips (and respecting copyright)

1. If you use Google: Click on tools and look for pictures labeled for reuse
2. Unsplash offers copyright free pictures.

<tr>
<td>Compare this</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Slide has 22 words and a single idea. The Image conjures the sense of being thoughtful and/or focused.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Images should relate to the idea being conveyed. They work even better if they convey emotion.
